

- |   |     |
|---|-----|
| 3. Baptism used by faith a powerful and practical means of grace                        | 186 |
| 4. Baptism rightly used can cover the whole life of the Christian from infancy to death | 187 |
| 5. A baptised person may be said to carry the seeds of future faith                     | 189 |
| 6. Infant Baptism justified through the significance of being born within the Church    | 191 |
| 7. The possibility of early regeneration in children                                    | 195 |

CHAPTER XVI. The Lord's Supper as Communion with Christ

- |  |     |
|--|-----|
| 1. The Words of institution to be interpreted according to sacramental usage | 197 |
| 2. The gift communicated   | 199 |
| 3. The communication of the gift   | 203 |
| (i) The body of Christ remains in heaven retaining all its human properties  |     |
| (ii) Communion with the body of Christ is effected through the Holy Spirit   |     |
| (iii) The flesh thus eaten in a spiritual manner                             |     |
| (iv) Christ present in a celestial manner                                    |     |
| 4. The reception of the gift   | 211 |
| 5. The Eucharistic sacrifice   | 214 |

CHAPTER XVII. Calvin's Justification of his Doctrine of the Lord's Supper

- |  |     |
|--|-----|
| 1. Calvin's claims for his doctrine  | 217 |
| (i) Clarity achieved   |     |
| (ii) Mystery preserved   |     |
| (iii) Absurdities avoided  |     |
| (iv) Conformity with the rule of faith observed  |     |
| (v) A true eschatological tension maintained   |     |
| 2. Calvin's doctrine determined by his views on the nature of the sacraments                           | 226 |
| 3. Calvin's view of the "communication of properties" in relation to his doctrine of the Lord's Supper | 229 |